POOSHEE
Near Pinopolis, Berkeley County, South Carolina

Owner: Santee-Cooper Hydroelectric and Navigation Project

Date of erection: Nineteenth century

Present condition: Partially burned; in danger of inundation

Description:

The house, large in scale, is two full stories high below a broad low hipped roof, with two gabled dormers. Two great square chimney stacks pierce the side slopes of the roof. Pooshee has the same equal tiers of windows upstairs and down, with an elaborately framed triple mullioned window occurring over the entrance door. This latter has flanking sidelights framed by slender pilasters below a full entablature.

Plan: wide central hall extending from front to rear, with two large rooms on each side. A chimney serves each pair of side rooms.

Additional data:

The present wings are not original. The interior of the house was badly damaged by fire and is largely bereft of its trim.

Author: Thomas Theobald
